

New recruits Nathan Anthony and Sarah Atkinson

Nathan and Sarah join Lee Evans Planning

Lee Evans Planning is delighted to welcome two new members of staff.

Nathan Anthony joins us from Ashford Borough Council where he has worked as a Strategic Planning officer for the last five years. During this time he has handled a variety of different planning matters, including developments concerning housing, offices, retail and other commercial enterprises, change of use applications and planning appeals as well as involvement with planning contribution agreements and public and stakeholder consultation events. Nathan has recently completed an Msc in Town Planning Policy and Practice and is now working towards becoming a member of the RTPI. His particular areas of interests are aspects of planning concerning Urban Design and Regeneration.

Sarah Atkinson comes to us all the way from Canada and is looking forward to gaining knowledge of and working within the British planning system. She has experience working in both the public and private sector in the Canadian planning system. Sarah started her planning career with a private developer in Vancouver and gained experience seeking planning permission for residential and commercial developments. Following that she moved into the public sector working for the City of Surrey where she dealt with a wide range of planning applications ranging from residential zoning applications to industrial development permits. Sarah has a BSc in Planning and Environmental Studies and is a provisional member of the Canadian Institute of Planning and will be working towards membership with the RTPI.
